

Good afternoon, Joel –

I hope this message finds you well. I wanted to express my gratitude for the time you spent with us in Oklahoma City this past fall. Being in the utility industry, many of our members drive to and from work sites many times a day. Your presentation on distracted driving was not only touching and heartfelt, but it was truly motivational – driving change on both a professional and a personal level. The experiences you have shared are astounding, making attendees realize that with just a little more thoughtfulness, each and every one of us can be that much needed change to save lives and to teach our children how to become responsible drivers.

Thank you so much for your time and sharing your story. It is horrific what you and your family have done through, and we appreciate you having the strength, energy, and courage to share with us so that we may all learn from it.

Best,
Amanda
