To Whom It May Concern,

I can say without hesitation that having Joel Feldman speak to our employees was one of the most meaningful sessions we've hosted at Hunt Companies. His presentation made a real impact - not only on the people in the room, but on me personally as well.

Distracted driving is something most of us deal with every single day, often without giving it much thought. Joel has a rare ability to meet people where they are. He doesn't lecture or shame. Instead, he shares a message that is honest, human, and deeply relatable - and that's what makes it so effective. He reminds you how quickly an ordinary moment can turn into something life-altering, and that message stays with you long after the presentation ends.

What stood out most was how broadly his message resonated. Employees reached out afterward to say how much they appreciated the session and how it changed the way they think about distracted driving. It went far beyond texting - it was about everyday habits we all have, and the responsibility we carry to ourselves and to others when we're on the road.

Joel was also wonderful to work with throughout every step of the engagement. He is personable, accommodating, and genuinely focused on making sure the message landed in a way that mattered to our organization. His goal is clearly impact, not just delivery, and that shows in everything he does.

I would recommend Joel to any organization without hesitation. Distracted driving is, unfortunately, part of modern life, and his presentation is an important reminder of the consequences - and the choices - we all make every day. If you have the opportunity to bring him to your organization, I strongly encourage you to do so.
